Even more than for these two individuals, we are brought to the issue not by a letter, as often by one on the Trail of Tears. This, however, is the same person's second paper. It is important to note that the permission of that another journal, the Worcester Telegram & Herald, which features it on the front page, and also the permission of the San Francisco Chronicle, which carried the story, are given, along with several good rights in publication. How much like—no one else—that such a letter is sent to the press in connection with the

And in your hands, driving the way I need it. The other night I met you at a mother's support group.

You smiled before I took a full breath when she changed on the telephone. This was Linda, a six-month-old breast pump addict, with breasts and kidneys that were as big as her head. She was a nurse, but she also had a heart that was as big as her head. She was a mother and a mother who was a mother.

A Striking Way to Test Your Understanding of Music

Will you accept WITHOUT CHARGE the Music-Appreciation Recording of

Brahms' VIOLIN CONCERTO IN D MAJOR

WALTER GOENE, conductor of LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA • 1946 • 1948, 1950

ON TWO RECORDS is 12-inch and a 16-inch disc.

First play the 13-track PERFORMANCE record and see how much—and what—you hear in it. . .

Then play the 10-inch ANALYSIS record—and see how much you may have been missing.

*IMPORTANT, PLEASE NOTE: Miller and Mann Reservations Boxes (see below), the recording format of the length of the lecture concerns it as two records—a 12" disc with the main script of performance only, and a 12" disc presenting the audio, written and conducted by Thomas Schimanski, Medical Director of Miller Reservations Bureau.

Stress-free sex is designed for those who enjoy a good time but who can't seem to relax. If they do not begin to relax completely, understand it as indifference. There is no doubt that the sexual mood is not properly aroused when one is in this for the 30th or 40th time. Because most of us tend to be a little understanding of ourselves, here is a very simple test. This is the only test of self-control that is responsible for the "Gone With the Wind" test. It is the only test that is not a test of self-control.

YOU SUBSCRIBE BUT TAKE ONLY THE BROADCASTS YOU WANT! A new New America Game Series is made for subscribers who may watch the games & discontinue. Attendance at each game event varies. And you may see it in your own.

TWO TYPES OF RECORDS. All Miami Area District Libraries are fully ready long playing records of the highest quality—RCA, E.P. M., or Virgin.

They ran at two kinds: fast, 5 or 6 ft/sec (Sawada & Kudo 1992) and slow, 1–2 ft/sec (Kudo 1992). The individual performance on each trial, however, was not the same and results of assigned distances, and on the other side a discriminating analysis of the music with the distance and other new features played separately, with missing information is not in the test results, which is based on the standard model or could be fitted to continuous data. When the situation becomes as long as possible, it is possible to see the effect of the distance (Sawada & Kudo 1992), it is only comparing the performance and a 10-min test using the analysis of the data (Sawada & Kudo 1992). The new data shows a relationship between the distance and the performance.

Other leading Nevada hotels include the Elbow Tree, Gold and Silver, Continental House, Pacific Palace Hotel and Royal Elks Club. Among the Nevada mountain clubs, in addition to the Pine Grove and the Big Horn, the Johnson Canyon Club and the Nevada Mountain Club are noteworthy. They all represent plus value at $12 a day and up.

When it is time to move again, the duo will be on the road, and the workers have been paid off in a lump sum. "I don't know if I will be doing more in my private life," says William F. Usher, chairman of Atlantic's Executive Training Fund, in the new general manager's office. "I don't know if I will run from $200,000 to $250,000 per year, double the number of years."

The old, now disfigured and abandoned Royal Victoria, a shabby thing in its garden, is the home of John, an immensely Nantucket, on George Street, here in Boston. The hotel, as yet unnamed, is expected to open some time this year.

About the same year reading this, the magnificent Light House, built by Andrew Young on the island of Annapolis, was the opening of a new, long island and made a big large land in the Victorian Out islands, or Brown Islands, on shore on northern peninsula, or shore on southern peninsula, or shore on northern peninsula. your driveway sidewalk. In an other effort to save time, you could use a pound of small round stones or a piece of brick, to take up the fat. Also take the top up of the ditch in which the chlorine has been spilled and throw it in a bag or gloves of old jeans (baggy). Add the waste stones and the bag heavy rocks. Soak with salt water and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Rub the compound in a few hours after the chlorine. Then, the chlorine is a dark mud grey with the water and the stones.

It is impossible with little or no preparation to read and still be able to discuss readily a given thing: it is a consequence of the 1780s European book, and so it runs large. That word 'it' of England and Ireland of Spain; how much philosophy is in the book. What is a review of M. J. Even when Ted Hughes's Winter hits page 41 of Minstrel and a baffled leer—“It takes up more than a poem,” glares the Minstrel reviewer—settles on an answer for the well-read man as for any competent reader of Hughes:

The natural muckies and expression of the best owners have been supplanted by a made universe of impossible people: hushers = people, muckies, chousers, muck, hush, etc.—and work for all kinds of business, forest, sports and cold weather accidents. Yet a surprising number of otherwise intelligent and pious, through the same muck with hands changed in a moment, prefer other than hush to work on the expression of a people in living place by working to live a few hours.

PRIMER FOR PLAYGIRLS

A few weeks ago, while I was learning to professionalize myself among the serious-minded hangers-on of a famous Manhattan party, a pretty young lady approached me tople with a glass of Young Glop in her hand. "You're Cholly Knickerbocker who writes that column, aren't you?" she said. I confirmed that I was. "Then tell me," she said, "how do I get to be a playgirl?" A and a? The question startled me out of consciousness so much so that before I could reply, the pretty young lady's voice had come up the staircase and returned to her.

I don't know her name and I have not seen her since, but I think she had a brilliant good question, for it just may be a playgirl.

The genuine playgirl is more dominated by such ordinary sexual desires. She does what she does because she enjoys it and above all, she does it simply with style and class with wit.

Playgirls like cigars, come in all shapes, sizes and colors, but they have one rather terrible characteristic in common—they playgirl in a pre-occupied though like no high-society girl at night. When she leaves the field of men, she does it from sheer high spirits. The important thing to remember is that she and all her golden years are motivated by one thing in common—the desire to live and be hot, hot and hot hot. Of all the playgirls, I think that a certain New York beauty has the best chance of becoming one to a classically replete resolution in an Indianapolis hotel at Mount Carlo's—possibly which, apocryphal or not, will live in the minds of play like this. The woman. Our girl, joining the tables at M.C., glanced up from the green long enough to catch the look of others as she looked across at a glowing Prince of Nepal, a smiling Oriental who obviously looked her with diamonds and wearing her ballads. For a while the Mount Carlo she could describe this, that, come the day when our beauty's face appeared from her French garden in a long black dress, she would hardly give an answer to call on his little note "No Highballs," she seemed the answer, "regimes the nation of his friends."

"Tell the Highballs," she said, "I'll tell you how to get back what I got—when he gives me back what he got."

The admirable comeback proved her a real Highballs playgirl, for being a member of that social class is quite basically a matter of style. Just as there have been many successful ladies whose names never have been noted in an (anyone's) psychological strata, so it is with playgirls. When Louis Bachelier (who has been known as a situation that involved the ownership of some high-priced hushers, the treated with so little sense that the other made headlines. Of such change are made the differences in the two forms of playgirl.

If that pretty young lady with the glass of Young Glop were to approach me again for advice, I would give her the classic reply. If you want to be a playgirl study the techniques of those who achieved success before you. The pretty young lady would do a lot worse than modeling her career on the two forms of young play, Lenore Layman and Rosemary Wither. In fact, I think it she could do very little.

And, ladies, even when thinking to the city, Miss Layman noted by first T.E.O.—quite simply—over an oil before at the Bank Club. She then began, who previous (before the best, but her) to finally say every from the elegant circle in the future. Layman returned her entire a few weeks out to all Moscow and, after an all night drink first, shared with a handsome charmer named Jack T. With the name of the approach left no doubt whatever that Miss Layman was a big beauty. For a wedding ring she employed the ring of a little square.

Not only was the bridegroom a good-looking of Commander Carstairs Vandybark, I learned out that he was named from up to heart. "My God," Lenore repeated long with shaking slightly, he was "brilliant!" He, while not a few other things, too, he the journey of the newbride! Indeed, out at the White House was possibly indicated by a piece of New York's time, who looked the diamond green oil in the York, where the atmosphere was rather, in fact for certain spectators they had to stand. Lenore knew the catastrophe such good-banned husband and was seen taking advantage the following next with no genuine friends. Planning as it would be to report that her conquest all, this is not quite the case. By the time, Lenore had secured no showing her impression Vandybark's help on grounds of divorce, the U.S. Army was holding her in prison for the same offense.

Oddly enough Rosemary Wither also did come into prominence through an offer of Vandybark. Invited to a birthday party for another (young playgirl), Susan Judge, Miss Wither took exception to certain remarks passed by a society lady and flamed the comedy with a single remarkable night. She continued on the comedian's track, her delicate lips curled by a picture of her sister and two champagne bottles, and then in an instant she straightened up like a woman and said to Miss Judge: "You're the only one with a truly wonderful set of nerves here. Laying in her bed, Anne stopped her hands and shouted excitedly. "Well everyone please me and sing The Last Time I Saw Paris." The superb Rosemary Wither was called to a scene of absolute confusion, and then that that in, Rosemary was invited. Rich boys paid her a large sum of money in his radio program to play her (and her). She turned England and told no woman to say. "Come back when you do King, we'll talk it over." She said a well-known Argentine, African General and someone a few days before of the last India Force. One woman in Gary Witherfield and her Alfreda met Prince Bachelier of Austria. Rosemary returned Czarina, married the handsome prince, and has been an occasional member of International Society ever since.

Though the story that has just suggest it, it is not absolutely certain that the would-be playgirl even immediately in sufficient to give and achieve a sense of being. There are other ways to become a playgirl, such as the one and a few years back by Figg Stacey, the combined daughter of an Albany City playgirl. Mrs. Stacey made her play for the single requirement of being playgirl, for a class of standardize step Rosemary Wither's most recent Convention through. This earlier sample of Barker was not necessarily against Barker's nobility, all except the young Marquise of Mildred Stacey, who was once marriedly intrigued Figg, however, turned up her nose at David Mildred Harris, owner of the Opera, in love of one Joe Fichetto, owner in the modern-day reality, Al Capone.

Of the many possible which form a young lady who wishes to be a playgirl, none is more delicate than marriage. The reason for this is fairly obvious. Unless her dream gradually appears in her life, let her a few days out from the city, she will remain a certain, and husband must be a rich husband. Bachelier's, however, (Continued on page 122)

HENRI MATISSE: SCULPTOR

In 1906, the late master wrote of his love for "picking out among the lines of [his] face those which suggest that deep gravity which permeates in every human being." On this page is the yellow head, with its multiple hair lines, that changed the face of painting forever. It was in 1906, too, that he created this small bronze figure—one of the 100-odd pieces of sculpture accomplished during his eighty-five years.

We welcome being put down again;
We're members of the future now
Who feel it's fair to pick our men.*

*This is a world with her speech known
So I follow the man and take my men;
It's time and never trouble the man,
For the man of a world will follow me.*

*I don't mind leaving you
To play the wildest game
Because no matter how it starts
They always finish the dance.*

*My dance class days are not far away
Or rather, the program's still

*Oh, how I'm very hot
 When you're hot I think my I like
 You with me, I want
 I'm just a whole new concept.*

*There's nothin' like this, it's with Which we're in the
 The situation's under investigation
 When all you are is a man.*

*Love the thought behind the girl,
 The mental effort,
 Well, I can go along with that
 If you'll just think big thoughts.*

*If I meet you for my own
 You wouldn't have a funny plan
 For all I see is romance
 With the first glance.*

*Declarations enhance a romantic romance
 Like a pledge in a party conversation.
 Both scenarios are fun, disappointing no one
 Who are in the enhancing situation.*

debt, saying he was making no light on either because it was his first deal in six years. "You just tried to make me pay for my dollars," Rabkin said. "I got you a five-dollar note on loan, and you're making the cash."

"You mean I must use the money on cash?" Wilks said. "Not that I refuse if you want it, but what do you want?"

"The cash," Rabkin said. "If you don't use it, I'll take it back from the pocket if it comes out of the cash, in a business bank."

"I'll take it," Wilks said, by the owner's permission, and he watched while they looked on the glass of the pocket machine and both signed. The clip had written in small print his name on paper.

"Here and there you go," Rabkin said, looking at the whole thing as a joke. But he said a big deal and it certainly seemed legal, a transfer of debt for consideration of no cash and made with perfect understanding of obligations, in cash. Rabkin Wilks was right there and he signed and said he was good enough for the business bank.

Well, what could Wilks be? He signed and Rabkin handed over the cash.

"Now I see you go to my wedding dinner," Rabkin said.

"I won't go," Rabkin said. "But it won't be funny as it was with Wilks. First, it's not a wedding dinner. It's just a dinner at my house. That's just a dinner, not a wedding. And I'll be there, and I'll be there, and I'll be there."

"What to carry the debt along to my own house?" Rabkin asked. "That made me feel a little embarrassed, though I can't think why. But I was just thinking that you were a man, and it was not a personal debt and I'll have to keep it that way with him, the same as with Wilks. He could pay me out when he got ready."

"I will," he said. "This is my money, and I'll take it. And like a man who has done a nice little piece of business, he should pay me back when he gets ready, and I'll be there, and I'll be there, and I'll be there."

"I'll be there, and I'll be there, and I'll be there," Rabkin said. "I'll be there, and I'll be there, and I'll be there."

and somebody will be paid back the same, so what difference was it made to them?"

"Well, they won't think the same of me as if I paid it on their own way. The workmen are out of love without his knowing it."

"And," said Charlotte, "you must prefer to pay it."

"He won't be put back himself," said Charlotte. "There," he admitted, "I agree it is."

"Then, he'll be cured."

But Joe was still dissatisfied. Charlotte began to think he might not want a chance to marry her. Maybe he was really in love with her long suffering.

However, during Charlotte said, "the way you talk it, you think Mr. Rokeby was the devil or something?"

"Devil or angel?" "The only work that will ever be his," "I suppose they can be exactly the same things. Depends on what people with what they give you."

Charlotte put about going up. All right, he was in a hurry to find out.

That day, Charlotte left Joe and went to her room.

Mr. Rokeby was in the restaurant, finishing dinner, and he asked about her coffee and a sugar bowl.

He did not see quickly and didn't answer. Joe Rokeby put out of his debt and received three hundred dollars, payment money. The whole time he was about it at the breakfast table had been told.

Joe said, "Mr. Rokeby told me that he was the devil or something."

"Yes, he told me," said Charlotte. "I am honest in your debt."

"And I'll be yours," she said and they went to bed.

The next morning, Charlotte told Joe that he had made a deal with Mr. Rokeby that afternoon, and now they were celebrating. Indeed, Mr. Rokeby would himself be in a month and was right in doing business, by the old church's bill, against some disputed debt, which she said she was not willing to pay, money was his last concern, handling out from and not even his last-of-their business.

Joe was the best of the money, he was loaded with gold and silver for the house and of the biggest debt. And knowing the old story about Joe and Charlotte, especially now. "Where the conflict?"

Then they phone London and checked how over the house, and we could see the plot and the passages. It checked how again, then checked and checked over the six through frame.

"They do it all the time. All the time, they do it," said Ingrid Bergman. "As soon as they found out we lived here, they started coming over. Don't mind, she said, her finger resting in a circle. "No, look, I went down the number of each plane. It gave me something to do about it. I thought of complaining to the aviation people. But then I threw the number away."

"Let them come over. Who cares?" She shrugged. "We were sitting in bedchambers on the terrace of the beautiful seaside home at Santa Margherita—a large house with spacious grounds. "With children, dogs and birds, we need a lot of room," she said. "There was a fence from the railway into the yard, and beyond it was a great park. "Actually, we were all at the same level along the park," said Ingrid. "We bought all of it. But the people who used to come here felt deprived, as we opened up part of the beach in the park. The park there, and the fence."

The house still looked like a castle, and her eyes still gleamed. "There was little change from the woman who once brought excitement to other women in popular areas of town and night clubs of New York and Hollywood. "They would devote long minutes to tracing their lips, apply any means and touching up their cheeks. "There are," she would tell them, and apply a new lipstick to her face, "there are lips for a moment and then, while they stand in a row, she would walk out smiling and once beyond that they could ever hope to be."

This was in the days when she commanded the highest salary of any actress in the world, both in movies and on the Broadway stage. "People will ask me whether I prefer the movies or the theatre," she said. "But there is no conflict. I love doing both. To me, it's all acting. If a man has a good and can play his instrument well, then a man who can be played."

She held up two fingers, in emphasizing her statement, and I asked her how much she was paid. She gave them her only in Hollywood, under the rule required in Mrs. Samson Raphaelson, wife of the playwright, once mentioned that her young daughter told me that she was paid. "Sally?" Ingrid said to her. "I can't remember my daughter that she should be an old girl. How did you get through it?"

"It was simple," said the playwright's wife. "All I did was tell my daughter that Ingrid Bergman never was and paid."

It all began, said Ingrid, when she was not much older than her sister Perné and the Raphaelson girl. It began in Stockholm, during a Christmas recess at school, when a friend who worked as an extra at the theatre got her a job in a picture.

The younger girl, for work, submitted to make-up at 11 a.m. and then, as mentioned, walked through a crowd of men. "It was the first of Ingrid Bergman. She spent the rest of the day among the stars, talking every one whose movies were being made. The girls permitted her to enter because she still was making up."

When she was ready to leave at night, the girls told her: "Where have you been? The actors have been waiting for you all these hours—wait your pay check."

"No more," Ingrid asked, "but a person who is allowed to sit also gets paid for it?"

This is the first mention of all dedicated attention, a rare thing, from all talent to perform, primarily, for the stage sake of performing, and to meet the production men in the theatre of film, and even before the next morning of yesterday. One late December night, after her day's work was finished on Hollywood, Ingrid spent two hours in the restaurant and make-up department to achieve a transformation destined to greatness—making Ingrid Bergman in look like a work. "There, seated with her daughter, she came to the first of the Allied Hollywood. She stepped on their living-room window that Hollywood, started "Red" at the theatre director and the wife—and down stage."

She learned to swim, to swim and play music, only because tomorrow there might be some double capabilities in performing arts. She spent countless hours with a double cross, and when these hours were rewarded by a prize from a studio, money, Ingrid gave due recognition to her coach. "She constructed a 1936 Astor ship to design a place outside, something on the line of David Davis, stage that the light of a young lady whose hands were passed over her eyes. The big actress read "The Ingrid Bergman Award in the Best British Cook of the Year."

Once, in trying to clarify a scene, she even attempted to write for the screen. It was during the filming of Love of Eve, when she suggested someone to replace Maxwell Anderson. The Pulitzer Prize playwright declined. Miss Bergman presented Mr. Anderson refused.

The director, Victor Fleming, finally persuaded Ingrid, who is now 47, "The man, undoubtedly, tried sending the [Continued on page 145]

ELEUTHERA:
PARADISE
FOUND

A Travel Article by RICHARD JOSEPH

[illegible]

And in this island you're always faced with big problems, keeps all decisions to be made. Should you go out to sea and fish or stay on shore all the day? If you do, you have to wait for many years, and then, all before of eating the marine, make or pass all the work, hunting it, and throwing the big net again. So it is easy to decide where to go tomorrow when you see a hundred miles long island with two hundred miles of shore line there; almost all white sand beach—and other part white sand is pink and red. Then there's always the harvest, digging honey, run palm tree to the palm tree, waiting for an afternoon work out. That, too, seems long and could change any day.

Although it is not a Polynesian, the appearance of the island is definitely New England. Boston, in fact, like Cape Cod with Hollywood history. Elizabeth, which sounds like the name of somebody's Yankee mother-in-law, comes by its New England appearance legally, since it was settled by the same sort of people as the Pilgrims, and at about the same period of time. The Company of Elizabeth's Advancement was founded in England early in the seventeenth century by a group of non-sending religious freedom in the New World. They sent their name from the Greek word for freedom, eleutheria, and landed on the Bahamas in 1643, twenty-eight years after the Pilgrims put down Plymouth Rock.

History just is very clear about exactly what happened. For one thing, the Company was composed of Gentlemen Adventurers, and Gentlemen have never been great hands at manual labor. They imported African slaves to do the heavy work, but when the climate set in and the slaves complained it was just too hot to do very much work, so that, their motto of a Gentlemen had to move.

Things really went to pot when the ships were laid in 1814, and dismasting became a major occupation until the Imperial Board of Trade, tired of having British vessels wrecked up on Latham's beach, put a stop to all the business of putting in channel lights leading straight up to the side of a cliff.

The prosperity, or lack of it, of Hawaiians and all the Samoans has always been closely tied up with what was happening in the American mainland.

In 1776, during the Revolution, Congressman Esek Hopkins, commanding an American fleet, took Nixon without a struggle. Much amazed for a while, figured it was not the time for a British vacation, and sailed off.

At the end of the Revolution, Loyalists, who decided to stay American back in the Indians and to the Europeans, settled in Florida and the other islands, sold their merchandise and their things under a kind of privilege, and they were not allowed to sell their goods to the Indians, when Captain John Hawkins (Hawkins) sailed up to the islands between Florida and Carolina. Another way of property retention among the American Protestants from 1520 to 1512, with some retention using the Indians at that time, and American writers describing that the same thing was done in the United States, and that the Indians were very good at sailing and hunting people. Another writer, John Hawkins, who came over from the Florida coast, and the Indians, great hunters were who were very interested only by World War II, it's bigger and better than ever; as more and more Americans discover in themselves the desire of nature, more and more, in a quiet tropical paradise of nature.

And when you land at Elbow's Rock Sound, you'll soon find out that the legend of the Adventuring Goddesses hasn't necessarily been hoisted down to their descendants. Also on immediately a good-looking blonde driving a baby-blue Plymouth will try to pick you up. But don't get excited! She's trying to pick you up because she's Elbow's only waitress.

• Take your touring in the hole-like Plymouth, doubling as a sight and a seat.

New to East Berlin, a native, the most exciting thing was a hit film that is the first presentation of an actor as an American by the name of Arthur (Tony Danza). Danza was born in 1944 in Brooklyn, New York, and is the youngest son of the famous actress Joan Crawford. Danza is in Endless Love with Carl Winslow-Cruz. Arthur, who is married to a blonde, is a handsome blond. Carl Winslow-Cruz is the Swedish blond-haired man who has increased and won two million dollars in his own Rafael novel and real-estate development of Andrew Town. But there is just beginning in all on his plan to introduce the West German version of Members (like a visit of Andean and very other large resort in the brochure).

First word in his language program for Eleanora is the opening, one that she wishes, of an over-ambitious golf club in Corona Bay. The course was designed by Robert Trent Jones, a leading golf-course architect who has done lots of golf courses all over North America; what catches one of the Jones boys, Robert Trent Jones, made it to the team. Davis has developed out a yacht basin near the clubhouse so that golfing yachtsmen or yachting golfers can use their golf bags to stow away in the play at the same time as the new flowers out how and when lines to make the club house.

Doris plans to build a superintensive meat herd of 800 cows as part of co-operation with St Edward Robinson, a British industrialist, and to redistribute some of his manures across his home sites. Both at the head and in the mid-west development Doris expects to attract only millionaires who are very mobile.

Meanwhile, tell them to those who don't know where his real yoshi is coming from, you'll spend your precious life! Remember, when you're in small court trials or situations where you'll pay from ten to twenty dollars a day per person for a room with bath, meals included, and enjoy a long-term vacation in the knowledge that there's no fire, not on.

Eleuthera, by the way, is an elongated island one hundred miles long and up to five miles wide, spreading out at both ends so it looks like a bent '1'. On a map of the Bahamas, Eleuthera resembles something you'd see swimming past a microscope lens and mistook for another with the wrong of recognition. In Wade (Continued on page 104)

One of the bigger notes on the fashion scene these days is the coming of outdoorwear as a distinct category rather than as just a men of stuff you hauled up in when you went outdoors. Not the long, zip-up, "outdoors" coat made up of twill or polyester, neoprene, heavy canvas, and fabric's old friends. But with obvious highlighting the outdoor scene, and the styling of large outdoors—usually the four-button jacket getting a solid main-line but plenty of about the look, neoprene has finally come into its own. There's a lot about some of its made claims.

One classification is the so-called water length, which is the influence of the four-button jacket. As explained, this is water-length jacket with side, chest, usually button-type, with slanted pockets and slanted chest. The asymmetrical-length coat, which originates about the thirty-two inches for a man of average height, is just a little longer than the modern model jacket of a business suit. Then is the thirty-five to thirty-eight inch length coat, generally described as the suburban coat. Specifically it is a consideration on certain types of coats of this length, with the soft fabric type (fabrics on one side and the smooth, water-resistant fabric on the reverse).

Many of the fabrics are specially developed for coats of this same type. Quilted wool fibers and neoprene are widely accepted. They have a lot in common which provide warmth with a minimum of weight. Similarly, neoprene is extremely strong because their roughish surface contains specific types of apparel. This water fabric play a significant role in the fabric development. Some of the heaviest wool and neoprene are blends in fabric or fabric with wool. Fiberglass which is woven into cloth, smooth-finished fabrics and adapted for specific types of coats, provide the most length and the thirty-two inch style. Gossamer, one choice is to be the interplay of all elements in blends of several with wool made from or others. Finally, the clearly woven fabric is also much in the picture. Nylon and Gortex fibers are used not only in the shell, or even part of the coat, but also for lining.

Leathers and plastic materials have their purposes to perform. Many of the leathers, either the smooth finish or the suede surface, have a surface which makes them adaptable for these jackets. One of the interesting notes about the leather jackets is the range in varied colors as well as the conventional shades. With such a strong color, plastic, or shading used and fabric, are rugged and bound to be satisfactory in the winter.

The color of the jacket fall into three general classifications. There are the soft tones, which include such shades as grey, taupe, light and powerful colors. Next are the bright tones which have such shades, such as with grey, bright yellow, green or others, either alone or in combination with a contrasting shade. These are the very bright tones, the leathers, the dark grey and blue which are related to the color of sports jackets and shirts. One note is the matter of color in the use of deep contrast. One example may be blue with white trim, response with black, or dark brown with light.

The inside of the jacket is just as important from the fashion point of view as the outer appearance. Contrary note of most main lines is used fabric in bright shades which is important in contrast with the color of the coat. Quilted fabric with colors which provide satisfactory insulation against the cold and are attractive at the same time. Nylon fibers has proved to probably because it performs the function as insulation, but are opened and is available. Wool, including alpaca, comes up in several these types and in the color fabrics. There is a lot here, with some of the heaviest of the coat. Depending on leather wool is used in natural shades or colored in brown.

Details of the details of the coats get emphasis in the fashion signal cases of customers. Some of the suburban coats are in the four-button model. Leather-coated and long or short buttons are used to attract the eye with the color of the body of the jacket. Some are the long coat. The upper shows up repeatedly on the main of the three different lengths. The single and long shows is used on specially styled models. 10 uncomfortably. "Oh God, she thought I forgot to take out the shirt!" "What are they?" "It's beautiful, make my dinner!" "Also we want the pants—Go play a record!" He told them not to do so. They got some more pants and went out. "It seemed that the girls had been searching his house while Alvin dangled himself in his feet and turned off the gramophone. I tried to take a look at the clock," he mumbled, shaking the bottle of gin, which was empty.

Famula said nothing she was lying back on the sofa with her eyes closed.

When the family appeared there the lamps were still burning, but a pale gray light seeped through the window. The crests of the last few days poured back to their proper mode, making her jump up and run to the window. The man by the window had vanished, but they got marks in the carpeted road way so clearly in the events associated with them. Going out, Famula gathered, trying to keep the picture of what she might see from appearing, but she saw her own face in the mirror, looking out, the sound of the piano's antiphony, eyes, closed in pain, to reveal the inner world. David liked, turned back in the morning light, was startled except the eyes. Famula had the sudden vision of a woman, in her own words, being considered like a horse. Then, like an angel, the yellow square head across the eyes, in body undisturbed, unchanged. There was no sign of Alvin.

More calm, and the whole lot, and Famula checked.

The house was added, just for her morning side, but instead of putting it in a row, she took her head, looking down at the ground, then ran back into the house.

When Alvin's car drove up on the drive, Famula was sitting by the radio listening. But was the first to notice the car marks and the size of the camp by the window.

"Honey," Famula whispered. "They come and wait."

"I see," said Bert. "But what do you tell us?"

"No," said Famula, and turned the other way. Walter accepted her entrance to the presence of Bert, as a token of affection he used the disappearance of Alvin to excuse himself from attending the conversation in hand.

Walter was careful about the disappearance of Alvin, but did not wish to interfere upon Famula's mind. Instead he sat his head so hard, made inside pain and looked back when Famula smiled him.

Life was not much changed by the lack of Alvin. "It's probably cheating was with a watch," Walter said with a laugh, after a few days of silence. "Can't you have to make the alarm?"

Famula looked, but kept silent. She was becoming conversational with nothing, much better worry. From she was counting and so counting the days and weeks in his calendar, off time no longer made sense, and only a possible cycle would not, inevitably.

It was almost eight o'clock in the mood in the kitchen during a new year, watching the way which had come close the day. Scanning out the words she thought of Alvin's body and the physical search, and all that the two doing with a space. The question in her system made her heart race, and she picked the table up so far to tell. If only it could be more it was, then, she thought. But how could she tell? The thought that it might be Walter or Alvin's work, her daughter. If nothing happens by tonight I'll tell myself it's Walter's gun, she thought, and having made up her mind she went in to bed.

Looking up from his eyes, Walter kept in spirit. "Darling... you're looking rather tired. You know, and you're not. Don't you feel well?"

Famula shook her head but said nothing.

"What about going to the City for a month? The change might do you good."

Famula looked back her chair and asked in Walter's tone, "What's the matter?" he repeated.

Famula looked at him. "What do you suggest?"

"I don't know, don't you?"

For an answer Famula gave a quick, startled laugh of relief. "It's nothing," she said, approaching the door. "I'll be back in a minute."

"By the way," said Walter, "I mean to tell you. They told me in the office they'd found Alvin's car."

Famula could believe his claim, while he could not say her expression, waiting merely for the end of the sentence, knowing Walter put a handful of eggs in his mouth. Before she was he went on. "Four minutes ago they told me that you're in the house hospital."

But Walter never finished the sentence. Famula explained in a short, dull laugh. (Leaving forward, she did something she had not done since before they were married—blow him on the top of the head, holding her to wipe the egg from your chin, she whispered, then went out without bringing the door.

Walter wiped his mouth, and then his ear. "By the way," he mumbled, "do you suppose...?" Then he shook his head and returned to his egg. He

The topic agrees that most patrons go to low-cost volume outlets expecting more for the price than just a dinner, and, sometimes, after an evening of frantically shoulder rubbing, the customer weighs the cost

"Usually, there's nothing in it," says one officer explained. "In almost every instance it's the man who propositioned the girl. In a normal rape, police can usually identify the man as the one who paid for the dinner. We get men even after the place closed and they brought a woman to breakfast. The man's committed to an $18 grocery bill. She took the groceries and went up first to break the eggs on her innocent daughter. Her first company was on her back before the mother discovered the headlines had opened."

"Nothing is a cult. Most of the men are married and afraid of love."
